

Regular Monthly Meeting

Surf and/or Turf at the Roost

Our final outdoor dinner meeting of the season is always a feast. Dig into a steaming Maine lobster, fresh from the icy waters off New England, with plentiful traditional sides. Grill-your-own steak is an option, or get both as a surf and turf dinner. This year, we'll be enjoying all this on September 29. Price is $20 for lobster, $15 for steak, or $30 for the combo.

Reservations are important. Lobsters are pricey, and we'll buy only enough to meet the reservation list. Please R.S.V.P. to Gene Poppel (610-647-1332) or genepoppel@comcast.net) by Tuesday, September 27. We also need helpers to wipe the dust off the picnic tables, set up the bar, set up the food station, make coffee...the list goes on and on.

Flyout

Flyout to a Long-Gone Vacationland

In the early and mid twentieth century, areas of Sullivan, Ulster, and Orange County in the Catskills of New York became populated with a group of resorts, known as the Borscht Belt. These reached a clientele of primarily Jewish vacationers from New York, and honed the show business skills of many entertainers old-time and new, including some as recent as Jerry Seinfeld. In fact, the movie Dirty Dancing was set in such a hotel, though it was filmed elsewhere. In the 1960s, Sullivan County International Airport was developed to serve these resorts. Unfortunately, this coincided with the growth of economical jet travel to Miami, the Bahamas, and beyond, which spelled the end of the Catskills resorts. Today, most are gone or are ghosts.

Those of us old enough remember Bethel, NY as the site of Woodstock. Bethel is just a few miles from the airport.

The airport, KMSV, is still there, with its 6,298 foot runway awaiting our arrival on our September 25 flyout. Served by five instrument approaches, but with light traffic, Sullivan County will be a welcome sight after our 94 nm flight, among some spectacular scenery, maybe even some early autumn leaves. Brunch will be at the café in the airport terminal. We'll gather at Penn Airways at 0930 for 1000 takeoff. Take a non-pilot or a student along, for an introduction to the world of general aviation—the fun and camaraderie. Contact Gene Poppel (610-647-1332 or genepoppel@comcast.net) and let him know if you'll need a ride or have a seat available in your plane.

This Beach Boys line from the song "Kokomo" is a paradox. Isn't it about the journey, not the destination? I write this from 34,000 ft on Southwest Airlines, going 500 MPH. There is a motorhome in San Diego that I plan to purchase. This rig will average 50 MPH, with stops. Why would anyone give up going fast and take it slow. Ask this of a Cessna 150 pilot and they will say: "we get to enjoy the experience so much longer." The phrase "it's all good" applies. Whether walking, biking, boating, driving or flying, it's all relative; all good.

That said, there is a class system in aviation. Bigger and faster is usually considered better. However, the word "enough" also applies. What is fast enough, or big enough for one pilot with one passenger? Guess it depends on the mission, money and how often one needs a bigger and faster aircraft. What I like about the USA is that we are accepting of diversity, of trying new ways to explore our world. It's all about perspective because both macro and micro views are important.

I encourage you to slow down and enjoy the journey of aviation with your PAOP friends, even if your life is in the fast lane. As the famous philosopher Jed Clampett said: "Set a spell, Take your shoes off. Y'all come back now, y'hear?" So please come to our last outdoor meeting of the season on September 29. We would love to see you.

Tap Dancing is not generally what you think of when you see me take off for a destination in the distance. But the next aviation challenge has come to me by way of my lovely wife Suzanne who has been a tap dancing little kid and a fan of the art ever since. It seems a dear old friend from High School invited her (us) down to Washington, D.C. to attend a tap dancing program at the Nations premier theater, the Kennedy Center. We get to visit with the old friend and her partner, see the Kennedy Center and have a good time. Seems simple enough until we get to the part where her friend says: “Your husband is a pilot, fly on down, we’ll pick you up at the local airport, we’ll go to the show and stay with us overnight.”

All the women are saying: How cool, the Kennedy Center, all the flying women and men are saying: That’s in D.C. The center of things called “No Fly”. But a challenge is a challenge. College Park Maryland is close to the friends home in North Bethesda; it is also the home of the University of Maryland. It also happens to be where College Park Airport is. And, oh yes, College Park Airport, while it is still in Maryland is not only in the Air Defense Zone (ADIZ) around Washington, it is in the smaller “No Fly” zone called the “FRZ”. Its’ two thousand six hundred feet of runway is not daunting any more than two thousand six hundred feet of runway anywhere else. But just like tap dancing takes preparation and practice, flying into the FRZ (call it the Frizz) takes preparation and a little more.

Sort of like Tap Dancing right? My next step is a Skype interview with the FBO at College Park when (if) my fingerprints are cleared. Life is good. If all of this comes together, we anticipate filing an IFR flight plan for a flight on October 5th and taking the 59-minute flight on down to College Park. To be continued next month...

So far, I have retaken the FAA DC Special Flight Rules Area Course number ALC-405, I have read and studied the public information regarding the NATACS Maryland Three (MD-3) program, filled out a Transportation Security Administration (TSA) MD-3 Pin Application, talked with the FBO at the College Park Airport on procedures, and filled out Form 201405NATACSFCE form which along with my fingerprints goes to the National Fingerprint Collection Clearinghouse in Reno Nevada.

"Lancaster Fly-In Drive-In Breakfast"

Topic: Preparation and execution of a safe night flight.

On Saturday, October 1, 2016 at 09:00 Eastern Daylight Time

Location:

Lancaster Airport. 500 Airport Road, Lititz, PA 17543

Select Number: EA1370755

Description:

Night flying can be some of the most enjoyable aviating that we do. The air is smoother, aircraft performance is better, and the sights can be breathtaking. But there are added risks, including loss of control and Controlled Flight Into Terrain CFIT. This FAA Safety Team Seminar will address how to mitigate those risks by preparing the pilot and the aircraft for night flight. To register, click on the link below TODAY!
